Rosecliff Literary

Jessica Berg

Jessica Berg founded Rosecliff Literary, a boutique agency dedicated to discovering and nurturing exceptional talent. With a Master's in Fiction from Spalding University and over a decade of developmental editing experience, Jessica offers a collaborative and informed approach to navigating the publishing landscape. She fosters long-term success with her authors, focusing on helping each author achieve their full potential.

Jessica's interests

Currently seeking both fiction and nonfiction projects with strong voice, emotional resonance, and something subversive at their core. In fiction, she is drawn to genre-blending work that confidently sits in one lane with an eye out for romantic suspense, speculative, gothic, and contemporary historical novels. She is particularly excited by horror across all subgenres, dark and spicy romance. As always, she'd love to see more upmarket book club fiction with big feelings and big hooks. She's always looking for stories from queer, trans, and BIPOC authors, especially those exploring identity, longing, ambition, or survival.

In nonfiction, she's looking for narrative projects with a wide reach: untold histories, true crime, pop culture, women's health, wellness and career books for women, and smart self-help or personal development. She is especially drawn to military nonfiction and stories by women working in traditionally male-dominated spaces.

Across all genres, she prioritizes platformed authors, distinctive voice, and projects that feel urgent, resonant, and unafraid to challenge the status quo.

Neon Literary

Eloy Bliefuss Prados

My name is Eloy and I am a literary agent at Neon Literary. After studying journalism, my first job in publishing was at Simon & Schuster editorial. I switched to the agency side of the business when I joined Janklow & Nesbit Associates in 2019. In April 2024, I moved to Neon Literary where I am building a list of fiction and non-fiction clients. I'm a fan of writing that is dark, strange, and funny. I love writers who are genre-agnostic and have a strong point of view.

Eloy's interests

Fiction:

Queer narratives, past and present, in the U.S. or abroad.

Gothic/Horror novels that are both chilling and emotionally grounded.

Voice-driven mysteries or thrillers that are literary in style and soaked in atmosphere.

Fantasy novels—either epic or cozy in scope—which manage to blend character-driven storytelling with finely-crafted prose and inventive world-building.

Non-fiction:

Science and nature writing, cultural histories and criticism, politics, economics, and current events, history.
